Once you get to 450 heads, though, you get down to very low probabilities. And at one or zero heads, you are a whisker above zero. The same sort of thing is true with our DNA. Because there are so many possible combinations of mom ' s and dad ' s DNA in each sibling, the siblings all tend to be pretty close to 50% related.

This finding fits very well with the idea that baldness can come from someone's maternal grandfather. Because each son has a 50-50 shot of getting an X from their maternal grandpa through their mom. The X and the Y chromosome determine whether someone will be a boy or a girl. If someone has two X chromosomes, then she is almost always female.
