"Cat-scratch disease is caused by a type of bacteria called Bartonella," Mahaney describes. "The bacteria is transmitted to cats from the bite of an infected flea [or through flea feces]. Humans can contract CSD from the bite or scratch of a Bartonella-infected cat" or if the cat licks a person's wounds. Flea feces containing Bartonella can end up under a cat's nails, Mahaney explains, and be

"Hands, joints and tendons are at greatest risk." People can also contract cat scratch fever, also called cat scratch disease (CSD). This comes from cats infected with Bartonella henselae bacteria from flea bites, blood transfusions or fighting with other infected cats. A bite, scratch or even the saliva of an infected cat can pass it along.

What You Should Do for a Cat Bite or Scratch – Health ...

Cat-scratch disease (CSD) is a bacterial infection spread by cats. The disease spreads when an infected cat licks a person's open wound, or bites or scratches a person hard enough to break the surface of the skin. About three to 14 days after the skin is broken, a mild infection can occur at the site of the scratch or bite.
