This paper compares the importance of different sovereign credit rating determinants over time, using a sample of 90 countries for the years 2002 – 2015. Applying the composite marginal likelihood approach, we estimate a multi-year ordered probit model for each of the three major credit rating agencies. After the start of the European debt crisis in 2009, the importance of the financial balance, the economic development and the external debt increased substantially and the effect of eurozone ...
