Is there life on other planets? (1962) | RetroFocus Life On Other Planets

The ultimate goal of NASA's exoplanet program is to find unmistakable signs of current life on a planet beyond Earth. How soon that can happen depends on two unknowns: the prevalence of life in the galaxy and how lucky we get as we take those first, tentative, exploratory steps. Our early planet finding missions, such as NASA's Kepler and its extended incarnation, K2, or the coming James Webb Space Telescope, could yield bare bones evidence of the potentially habitable worlds.

Finding Life Beyond Earth is Within Reach. The James Webb Space Telescope (artist's concept above) will be one of the primary instruments scientists use to continue the search for planets outside our solar system. Credits: NASA. Many scientists believe we are not alone in the universe. It's probable, they say, that life could have arisen on at least some of the billions of planets thought to exist in our galaxy alone -- just as it did here on planet Earth.

The rare Earth hypothesis suggests they should be very rare, save ones composed of microbial life only. On the other hand, Earth analogs may be quite numerous, at least in the Milky Way galaxy, given the large number of planets. Three of the planets discovered orbiting TRAPPIST-1 could possibly contain biospheres.

On Life On Other Planets is that line solid and brings the band solid pop songs with (for the above comparison to) Beatles-background vocals and Pink Floyd-guitar licks and psychedelics. Moreover, Life On Other Planets no lazy, 'laid-back plate for the characteristic Supergrass-enthusiasm is still available and occasionally proves the triad still firmly to be able to rock.
