"The work begins by drawing a contrast between the emphasis placed on the author, characteristic of the romantic hermeneutics of Schleiermacher, and the more contemporary emphasis on the text, as may be seen in Gadamer, Ricoeur, the Deconstructionists, etc. These two emphases are understood as concentrating primarily on the intention of the author, on the one hand, and on the intent or intents of the text, on the other. These two are joined in a hermeneutic that attempts to divine the author/text relationship."--BOOK JACKET.Title Summary field provided by Blackwell North America, Inc. All Rights Reserved

Exploring the different points of view and 'tones of voice' adopted in theology for the meeting of religions, this book presents a contemporary philosophical and theological engagement with key issues of how different faiths might meet, of comparative philosophy of religion, the use of aesthetics, inter-religious ethics and issues relating to the self. Providing a critical evaluation of contemporary liberal, post-liberal and conservative voices, this book highlights the use of the creative imagination and explores new ideas for the meeting of religions.

In this book the distinguished Roman Catholic theologian Bernard Cooke reassesses the long-standing Christian description of divine power. The word "power" evokes the spheres of economic, political, and social life. Cooke suggests, however, that the deepest questions about conflicting powers are theological and concern what Christians have traditionally referred to as "the Holy Spirit" and "salvation."

This volume brings together a team of scholars to discuss whether capitalism is moral. Berger and his colleagues challenge what they see as an uniformed and simplistic repudiation of capitalism on the part of many religious thinkers in the West. The contributors want more attention to be given to the creation of wealth, as against a simpleminded, socialist emphasis on the redistribution of wealth. David Novak offers a Jewish analysis of economics and justice; Michael Novak explores the development of Christian economic thinking; George Weigel examines recent Roman Catholic thinking on the subject. Other contributors include Richard John Neuhaus and Walter Block. ISBN 1-55815-112-5: $18.95.
